While he was seeking the Justice, however, the fowls sought pastures new, and he was unable to find them upon his return.

Dancing, Tobacco Cheving and Theatre Going.

(From the Cleveland Leader.)
At the late General Conference the traditional hostility of Methodists to dancing and theatre-going was reduced to a definite rule, and it now stands plainly expressed, as it had from the beginning been plainly implied; but to enforce that rule proves to be not always the easiest thing in the world. In a Methodist congregation not a thousand miles from Cincinnati is a matronly lady who has been a long while a Methodist, and among the foremost workers in the Sunday school and other church enterprises; every way a model of Christian propriety except that she will dance when opportunity offers and will go to the theatre occasionally to witness star performances. Not long since her pastor felt called upon to administer the proper rebuke for her open and repeated disregard for the rule, whereupon there followed something like the following:
"Yes, I dance occasionally, perhaps frequently for woman of my age, because I love to dance, and I think that under the circumstances, and in the society which I choose, there is no harm in it, and for the same reason I go to the theatre occasionally also."
"Yes, I admit that some people dance to excess, and even injure their health by it, and some very bad characters go to theatres, but that is no more a reason why I should abstain from dancing and theatre-going than that because some men injure themselves with tobacco is a reason why you should not use it all."
"Needless self-indulgence," indeed! That comes with poor grace from a man who uses as much tobacco as you do. Do you pretend to say that your tobacco is a cause of grace? Do you pretend to the knowledge and love of God?"
"Example! I do not wish to be rude, sir, nor personal, but your example has thwarted all my natural plans. I did hope to inculcate such a wholesome abhorrence of the filthy practice that at least my boy would be free from it. But, poor boy, he had not the strength of purpose enough to hate the sin with all his heart. He did hate tobacco, but he loves you, and has fallen in love with your habit. He has become almost as filthy as the preachers in the filthy practice."
"Excuse me, I am. Please excuse me. But when my pastor and my presiding elder, and all the bishops but one, and every single editor of the church papers, and all our missionary secretaries reveal in such faith, and then gravely meet in general conference and ordain that I should not dance in my own parlour, or go to the parlour of my neighbor, and shall not go to a theatre when my own sense of what
